* Discrepancies with data previously published is due to periodic data corrections.

The second quarter of 2017 slowed down significantly compared to the first three months of the year, with a negative performance for all segments, and particularly in the consumer segment.

When looking at the first six months, only a slight flexion can be seen for consumer tyres and agricultural tyre, whilst the other segments remain positive – and even significantly so, when looking at truck tyres (+7%).
